

This October at NTSU

This October at NTSU

Elizabeth Wathuti

Kenyan Environment and Climate Activist

Elizabeth Wathuti is a Kenyan environment and climate activist. In 2016, she founded the Green Generation Initiative, which nurtures young people to love nature and be environmentally conscious, and has now planted 6.8 million tree seedlings in Kenya.

She has attended the UN's Conference of the Parties (COP) several times and has advocated for more inclusive language in order to remove barriers to young people's participation.

She received the Wangari Maathai Scholarship award for her commitment to environmental conservation and has been recognised among the 100 Most Influential Young Africans at the Africa Youth Awards.

Want to join in on Black History Month events this year?

Click here to find out more

